Writing Task

We would like you to write a fantasy story using the images below to help you. First, plan out your story using the plan template in this pack. You will need to choose a setting, a fantasy character to describe and think of a problem that is being caused by the creature. Finally, you will need to decide how the problem will be resolved by the humans in your story. Use the lined paper to write your story. Use the success criteria to make sure you have included all the relevant key skills in your story and, if not, edit your story to include these skills.

My story is called:

Anancy

Who is Anancy?

Anancy is a character who appears in many traditional Caribbean stories and songs.

Anancy is a trickster of no small order
half a man and half a spider
Miss Muffet was sure glad
he hadn't sat beside her

He's unlike any of your friends
He's a whole lot smarter
He tricks and outsmarts
He's a real fast talker

He's slow on his feet
a zip on his wit
When it comes to thinking quick he's a wizard at tricks

He's never lost a game
'cause he cheats, double-crosses his friends
When he can't win fair
he's a spider again

Anancy is a trickster of no small order
half a man and half a spider
Miss Muffet was sure glad
he hadn't sat beside her

Seven Wonders of the World

Seven ancient wonders

Being a traveller was rough in Ancient Greece. For starters, there were no cars, trains or planes. Most travellers got around by walking, riding a mule (an animal like a donkey), on ox-drawn carts, or taking ships powered by oars. But the hard conditions didn't stop them. Just like people today, the Ancient Greeks liked to travel to new places and see and do cool things.

About 2,500 years ago, travel writers in Ancient Greece started making lists of the seven must-see 'sights'. The most awe-inspiring of them went down in history as the 'Seven Wonders of the Ancient World'.

The list of ancient wonders included amazing monuments like the Colossus of Rhodes, a 100-foot-high statue of the Greek Titan Helios, and the Lighthouse of Alexandria, a 400-foot-high tower that guided ships into Egypt's largest port. Others included the Hanging Gardens of Babylon and the Statue of Zeus at Olympia. But if you want to see any of these ancient wonders today, you're pretty much out of luck. Six of the seven have been destroyed by earthquakes, floods and fires. The sole survivor is the Great Pyramid of Giza in Egypt.

New wonders

Since the Ancient Greeks first created the concept of the Seven Wonders of the World, people who love list-making have been writing their own versions. Usually the lists are created by an individual or a panel of experts, but a few years ago a man named Bernard Weber decided to make a new list of Seven Wonders based on a public poll.

Bernard Weber was born in Switzerland and had travelled to nearly every nation on Earth. He wanted more people to know about the amazing monuments he had seen. So he asked people all around the world to vote for their favourites on a website he created. People in some countries—like Brazil and Peru—were very enthusiastic about voting. They really wanted their monuments to win! In the end, more than 10 million votes were cast, and the 'new Seven Wonders' were chosen. The winners were announced on July 7, 2007.

Not all of the 'new' wonders are actually all that new. In fact, some are pretty ancient. But new or old, they are all spectacular, and adventurous travellers can visit every single one.

This text is from Viking Vik and the Longship by Shoo Rayner.

Viking Vik and the Longship

The dragon glowered as Vik, Freya and Wulf stood hypnotised by its hard, staring eyes.

"She's beautiful," said Vik, running his hand down the dragon's long neck. "I wish we could sail on her."

"Me too," Wulf and Freya echoed.

Just then, Jarl Magnusson came striding down the jetty. "A Longship is no place for children," he boomed.

"Oh, Dad!" Freya fluttered her eyelashes. She knew how to get around her father – but it didn't work this time.

"Longships are definitely not for girls!" he told her firmly.

Vik longed to sail on a Longship. Just like his father, the sea flowed in Vik's blood.

"Will we ever get to sail on her?" he sighed.

Jarl Magnusson smiled, and spoke gently to Vik. "When you are strong enough and old enough to understand the dangerous ways of the ocean, then you can sail aboard a Longship."

The three children want to watch the Dragon set sail, so they go to the 'skerries', a group of small islands that reaches out into the sea. It is low tide, and they get to the furthest island, where they wait for the Dragon to sail past.

"We're quite far out, aren't we?" Freya's voice trembled slightly. "Are you sure we're safe out here?"

"Not scared, are you?" Wulf taunted.

"No ... just as long as we can get back safely."

It was a while before the sleek vessel sailed into view.

"Hurray!" the children cheered madly.

Jarl Magnusson stood at the prow. He waved his arms and called to them.

"What did he say?" Vik asked.

"Don't know," said Wulf. "I couldn't hear him."

"Never mind," said Vik, as he carried on cheering. "Go, Dragon, go!"

The children strained to see the last of the Dragon as she sailed over the grey horizon and out onto the big, wide ocean.

When they turned to go home, the three children had the shock of their lives. They had waited so long for the Dragon to sail past, they hadn't noticed that the tide had turned and the sea level had begun to rise. Some of the little islands were already underwater!

Belling the Cat

'Belling the Cat' is a fable, a short story with a moral or lesson to be learned. This fable is thought to have been written by Aesop, a slave who lived in Ancient Greece.

There was once a colony of mice living in an old house. Their lives were sweet and easy, with plenty to eat. But there was one cloud in their sky: the cat.

He was a huge fat ginger tom, but still very quick on his feet, and he liked nothing better than hunting mice. Almost every day, the mice lost one of their number to the swift paws and sharp teeth of the ginger cat.

The mice called a council to see what they could do. There was a lot of squeaking and muttering, but one mouse came up with an idea.

"If we were to get a bell and tie it round the cat's neck," he said, "we would always be able to hear when he was approaching. Then we could escape his clutches."

All the mice agreed that this was a really excellent idea. Indeed, they went so far as to get a bell and a ribbon. Now, all they needed was someone to volunteer for the job of tying it round the neck of old Ginger.

But, funnily enough, not one mouse came forward, not even the one who had suggested the bell. And to this day, for all I know, the big ginger cat is still catching mice, even though they know how to stop him, for want of a mouse brave enough to put the bell round his neck.

And it's no good our feeling superior to the timid mice, for how often do we humans also know the right thing to do, but don't do it because we are afraid? There is often not much to choose between us and those mice.

PSHE – LI: I understand that sometimes hopes and dreams do not come true and that this can hurt. I know how disappointment feels and identify when I have felt this way.

Look at the six different scenarios of hopes and dreams that have gone wrong below:

1. Emma and Oliver are promised a puppy which is then not allowed in the flats where they live.
2. The holiday is cancelled because a relative of Roisin has to go into hospital.
3. Farida breaks her leg before her gymnastics competition.
4. Issa thought he would be selected for the school football team but finds out he is only the reserve.
5. Jacob finds out he is not to be in the same class as his friends next year.
6. The swimming pool party is cancelled at the last minute.

Answer the questions below for each scenario. Record your answers on the back of this sheet:

- a) How might each child feel?
- b) What might the person do in that situation?
- c) How could they overcome the hurt that this situation might cause?

Think about a time when you were disappointed about a situation or a time when a dream didn't happen for you. Write a couple of paragraphs explaining what happened and how it made you feel. You can draw a picture to accompany your work.

Complete the sentence: 'A broken dream feels.....'

Complete the sentence: 'One thing I can do if I feel upset or hurt is.....'
